

B/ Focus - Changing Perspective

Explore how Perspectives can be Changed!

To change is to alter, its a substitutions, its to become different. A perspective can be recognised as a mental view or prospect. Changing perspectives occurs everywhere whether it is wanted or not. However, its the way that its concieved that shapes our perspectives to be different.

We can use ^{the poet} Peter Skrzynecki, 'Immigrant Chronicle' as an example of how one event can change perspectives and ^{allof} those being different. The poet composed to poems in memory to his parents, 'Feliks Skrzynecki' and 'Kornelia Woloszczuk'. These poems discuss the events that shaped their lives and how they shaped and reflected a different perspective to their son.

* 'further and further south of Hadrian's Wall' - distance between father and son believing in different cultures, reflecting on different lives, heritage

* 'Of a wasteland on the palms of her hand' this is a distinction of the distance between mother and son

* Stimulus Booklet - Miroslav Holub, 'The Door', asks us to be open to change, it requests 'Go and open the Door', doesn't matter if there's nothing there we may see different things and have different understanding but it asks us (the audience) to be willing not to be scared
