

Question 3 - Changing perspectives.

There are many changes in ones life. It is impossible for a person to never experience change in their life. This change could either be a negative change or a positive change. Even the smallest thing such as change in mind. You might almost perhaps make a change for a reason, but your perspective might be different once you have already made a different choice.

The novel "Looking for Alibrandi" the poem "The Door" and the movie "Remember the Titans" all show different changing perspectives.

Looking for Alibrandi, is a novel about about a teenage girl called Josephine Alibrandi, who lives with her mother, dislikes her grandmother for many reasons, and does not know her father at the start, she is also in love with a Guy called John Barton. Within the book Josie expresses her feelings towards all those people, and in the end she changes all her perspective towards those people. She meets her father and hates him, does not want to know him, later to realise how much she loves him and cares, she also dislikes her grandmother throughout the whole novel, yet in the end it all changes. Also the Guy she loved, she thought he had everything and had the best, but after committing suicide, her perspectives towards John change. In the Poem The Door,

It is telling us to open the door and make a change, see what changes are out there. "Open the door, maybe there's a castle, or a magical garden." Opening the door could mean opening the door to the start of a good change or it could be the start of a negative change. The movie Remember the Titans a football team of a Black community and a white community, ~~retired~~ who hate each other. Throughout the whole movie the coaches are trying to come ~~with~~ <sup>to</sup> terms with the players so that they can learn to respect each other and play on the field. At the end of the movie, all their perspectives change towards each other and they all become really good.

Sometimes it is best to just accept the change and move on. ~~an~~ Changes will occur in everyone's life. Even ~~your~~ perspectives about different things and different people will change.
