

(b) The diverse nature of young people's lives can affect their health status as the transition from childhood to adult hood can ~~my~~ influence their health dramatically. As they grow, they change their attitudes, beliefs & even the way they dress. There are many style of groups. The nature of their friends ~~or~~ or their ~~at~~ upbringing can affect their attitudes. For instance, there are many social groups such as homies, surfers, gothics. The media can effect ~~they~~ why they look, even though they might act as 'homies' but just to look like 'homies'. (They mightn't taken on the culture just 100% the part).

Also the media places a lot of expectation of individuals. Society's expectations for boys to be masculine & females to be skinny & ~~beautifull~~ beautiful. These high expectations can affect their mental well being, which could maybe lead to depression & later lead to suicide. The diverse nature of young people's lives affects their health status significantly.
