

Pope John XXIII was significant to the changes in Christianity. This is due to the vast contributions he gave and the reforms. Pope John XXIII started a council called Vatican II which was an ~~council~~ ecumenical council. He stated to modernize Christianity, he did this in various ways such as depleting the confession box, nun ~~the~~ uniforms were changed, and most significantly, he ~~made~~ ~~was~~ allowed masses and liturgies to be spoken in the language of the people which ever they preferred instead of in Latin. John XXIII also wrote texts such as "mater et magistra" which spoke of social issues within the Christian Church and also wrote "Pacem in Terris" which was a text not only for Christians but for "all men of Good Will". He also pushed for peace in the world, ~~in~~ in one occasion in the Cuban Missile crisis he eased tension between Khrushchev and Kennedy.
