

Time is something that always changes, no matter what. While time changes, people change, things change, most things change. Styles of art always change throughout time. That's why time plays a big role and affects the practice of artists.

There are stages that happen through time in the artworld where a lot of people start painting in the same style. For example, The Renaissance was a style of art which was ~~in~~ 'the' style back in history, after that, art styles were changing all the time. These days, not many people paint in the Renaissance style anymore. People/artists have to keep up with technology, and the different lifestyles people live. ~~##~~

All these things change the way people feel. These things give these people/artists more to think about, ~~more~~ and look at it through different views.

Time is very effective to the practices of artists.
