

4 a) ~~With~~ All the hopes of the Greeks and the trusted forces of war remained always with the help of Pallas. <sup>Not only</sup> ~~From~~ this the impious son of the Tydides but also the author of the crime Ulixes, wanted <sup>the ~~sacred~~ Palladium</sup> # to be removed from the ~~sacred~~ temple ~~on the~~ ~~utmost~~ citadel with guards on the citadel of the summit by fate, to snatch away the sacred image and to dare to touch the <sup>virginal</sup> fillets with cruel hands.

b) Horror was in all parts of his mind, just as the very silence terrifies. I retrace my steps men from home if only, if only she had gone there: the Greeks had rushed in and were keeping all the dwellings. Suddenly the fire turns to the highest roofs by the wind; the flames rise out, the crackling comes to our ears. I proceed and revisit the a bode of priam and the citadel:

and now with the gates empty of ~~troops~~

Juno they were saving to the guards to the roofs of Phoenix and dread Ulixes at once. Here on all sides Troy is snatched from burning shrines, both the tables of the gods and the bowls of gold are removed, and the captives wears the clothes. Children and matron mothers stand round in a long line.
