(a) venire

(b) auribus vestris & in oculis omnium

(c) ab amicissimis civitatibus and publicis auctoritatibus ~~causa~~.

(d) Now this most bold and most deranged man recognised cito. He understands thus, to come to the proceedings, having been prepared and instructed by me, so that I would have set up not only the clothes of gold (ablative) but before the eyes of everyone, his own theft and shameful act. I see that many senators to be witnesses to your own audacity; I see many Roman knights ~~shifting~~ coming forth, especially citizens and allies, to whom he himself made indignant injustices. ~~I even see~~

At this point (tam), I see even, the serious/gewe legates by the most friendly citizens, <for> when you have met with public authority.
