a) But this is the matter at hand: if he had executed the true ~~pirate~~ pirate captain once, ~~then~~ you would not ~~have~~ ^{have} this money; if this ~~counterfeit~~ someone or other ~~was~~ was dead or had escaped, it wouldn't have been difficult to substitute another in the imposter's place. I have already said more than I wanted about that pirate captain, and I have passed over those things which are the most certain arguments of this charge.

b) I will show that that ~~same~~ man, Gavius, whom you say was all of a sudden a spy, was thrown into the Syracusan stone quarries by you, and not only will I show this through the records of the Syracusan people, so that you are not able to say that I invented and chose his name since there was some other Cavius in the records, but to your judgement, I will produce witnesses who will say that that very man was thrown into the stone quarries at Syracuse.
